For various reasons, residents may find themselves facing a wide range of financial difficulties. To help those facing these difficulties, each of the city's eight wards have devoted help centers (Kurashi Sapōto Sentā) where individuals can receive guidance to get them back on track.

With the help of a licensed social worker, individuals can get the feedback necessary to help. Consultation services are available to residents who live within city limits and are experiencing financial difficulties (excludes individuals who are currently receiving public welfare, known as Seikatsu Hogo).

Family members can also come to the center to seek advice on behalf someone struggling. Support is offered to both individuals or family members and is conducted on a personal level to fit the needs of each person.
